Project description:

The overall objective of the Project is to improve access to justice for citizens and businesses through strengthened capacity of the Ministry of Justice in introducing Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) mechanisms and improved legal aid policy and provision. In that sense, the Project mainly aims at contributing to a more predictable and safer business environment and at enhancing access to justice by introducing mediation and other ADR mechanism as a way to solve family, labor, and commercial disputes.

Expected results:

One of the main results to be achieved is enhancing access to justice for citizens and businesses in the country by further developing the newly established mediation system and by potentially improving it through the development of a coherent policy on legal aid. Other expected results are including, but not limited to build the institutions in the capacity that empower vulnerable groups of population and to further improve their efficiency.
